

A Message From Omar Ishrak

Colleagues,

Recently, I announced the structure of the new Medtronic organization and the Medtronic executive leadership team for our combined company. Since that announcement, this new leadership team has worked to identify their leadership teams for our new organization upon closing of the transaction.

More details of the new organization can be found here. Click on "View Organization" under each leader's name for more information.

Guiding Principles

As you review these details, I want to provide you some of the principles that drove these decisions and some context on the information we are providing today.

- We must maintain current business momentum and ensure our post closing structure preserves our ability to continue this momentum.
- We used a common talent selection process to ensure fairness in decisions and consideration of members from both companies. Factors such as experience, scope of responsibility and job location were part of the selection process. These were difficult decisions to make, since there is so much capable and experienced talent in both organizations.
- Our regions, groups and functions will operate under defined operating principles and governance procedures. We will provide clear scopes of responsibilities and decision-making rights in the new organization. These policies will be shared with the new organization in the future, beginning with these new leaders.

The leadership structures and teams identified today and the process used to select them support these principles, and we will continue to strive to ensure there is a fair and uniform talent selection process for identifying future leaders as well.

Understanding Our Organizing Principles

There are some foundational elements included in today's announcements that I would also like to highlight.

- Each Group will have a lead in each region.
- Human Resources, Legal/Compliance, Finance and Quality functional leaders are named for each of the four regions and groups. Additional functional leads are named in some cases.
- Within the Regions, we have named specific Country leaders where those decisions have been made. Decisions on the remaining Country leaders may not be made until after close of the transaction. In those cases, critical integration planning decisions at a country level will be deferred to the Medtronic leader, with full consultation of their Regional leader and the appropriate Covidien leadership team.
- Leading up to the close of the transaction, we may announce some additional organizational structures and leadership teams. These announcements will be made in areas where operational continuity requires that we have a clearly defined organization and leadership structure in place for Day 1 operations. Most organizational structures and leadership teams, however, will not be named until after close.

Moving Toward Close

With the announcement of these leadership selections, it's important that each of us not lose sight of the legal requirement that we continue to operate as independent companies, under our current leadership teams, until closing of the transaction.

I am very pleased with our progress on the integration planning and our regulatory approval process. Our Integration Management Office and key leaders from both organizations will continue to ensure that we make timely and clear decisions to provide you as much clarity as possible as we move closer to and through the acquisition closing period. We continue to make great strides, and I am confident we will close the transaction in early calendar year 2015 as stated.

On behalf of the leadership team, I can't thank each of you enough for your hard work and focus during this time. People across both organizations – particularly those serving on our various regional, functional and group integration teams – have given so much to this effort.

Our hard work will pay off, and we will emerge after closing as a formidable player in the health care industry. Our future and the potential we have to treat more patients, in more ways and in more places around the world is inspiring to me, and I hope that you are equally energized about what the combination of Covidien and Medtronic can do together.

Regards,

/s/ Omar Ishrak

Omar Ishrak
Chairman and CEO
